

Franchises

It's a common misconception that a foreign business or company can only hire Americans to manage their US operations. This has never been true. We thought important to inform you of the following, should your company decide to expand its operations in the US.

Since your country is part of the World Trade Organization (WTO), it is recognized as a trading and servicing country. The rules on trade and services are well defined by the WTO. Over 160 countries are members of the WTO.

Advantages: Businesses or companies can conquer the world including the US.

Admissibility: Businesses or companies whose country is part of the WTO can expand their operation to the US.

Well defined international immigration rules which also include the US allow businesses or companies to transfer their key employees to the US.

Are admissible: key employees from the business's or company's home country who are considered to be essential to the success of the US operations. They will manage every aspect of the US operations. They obtain US visas and Permanent residency (Green Card) for them and their family (children aged 21 and under).

Your country also has bilateral treaties with the US. One of these treaties allows citizens of your country to petition for the Treaty investor visa. This type of US visa is tailor-made for small investors. To obtain a US treaty investor visa, they must invest in a business or start-up in the US. They obtain US visa for the investor(s), their spousal and children (aged 21 and under).

As experts in US business immigration since 1994, we have had the pleasure of assisting over 4500 businesses and companies expand their operations in the US and we have obtained over 30 000 US work permits and/or Permanent residencies (Green cards).

We are present in 25 countries.
